"never having attended a tribunal, it was probably the most enjoyable learning process I have had in the 20 years - very, very helpful. It brought to light that most of the issues the solicitors were questioning on could be avoided by taking more care in the initial stages of the disciplinary process. This has certainly changed my whole approach to disciplinary matters, thank you....." SC

On Tuesday 1st March 2011, well known employment lawyers, David Burnside and Sean Saluja, both accredited by the Law Society as employment law specialists, will again pit their wits on opposing sides at a Mock Employment Tribunal.

Last year's event proved to be very popular, with many delegates commenting on how helpful it had been in providing them with the opportunity to gain a better understanding of the employment tribunal process and in demonstrating the ways in which businesses may approach a situation where a dispute with an employee has reached tribunal stage.

Other members of the Paul & Williamsons' team will play the parts of the claimant and witnesses and Employment Judge Nicol Hosie and experienced Lay Members will consider the evidence and deliver the judgement.

"I found the tribunal extremely useful with relevant business criteria and topics used. I could relate to the business I work for" LC

"First class - an eye opener..." BW

"I found the solicitors discussion prior to the tribunal decision very helpful. Very realistic and extremely well organised"....."Well organised session, highly recommended to other HR professionals and line managers".

This promises to be an informative, action-packed event. Last year's event sold out, so early booking is recommended.
